stunt corgi vr

Thank you for this, Dev. It was the game I didn't know I wanted. Best part is becoming momentarily frustrated and throwing the prop over the fence and hearing it ruin someones day. A very wholesome game, I'm glad this exists.. boring and hard to learn for young ones. Virtual Reality needs more games like this. It is a relaxing, enjoyable, fun-spirited game.

Pros:
-Unlike most VR games, this is well optimized and fairly priced.
-These developers hired a Corgi specialist, the AI is exactly like my Corgi at home!
-The physics in-game are on point, nothing feels clunky when manipulating props.
-Corgi!

Cons:
-No autosave feature.
-I would love to see this game as a general Corgi simulator, with more features than just the stunts\/props.
-If you have a small room, there isn't much wiggle room when creating courses, as the only way to move in-game is to physically move around your room.

I would recommend this game to anyone, it is a fun, chill game that is a must have for Corgi lovers!. boring and hard to learn for young ones. I like this. In the videos it looks kind of rigid with the preset animations and it is but not as bad as it looks in the videos. You do have some interaction but it's very limited.

The obstacle course creation is actually pretty fun and makes me want to see just how crazy I can make it. Not great for demos due the complex nature since it's basically a level design software.

You can interact with the Corgi but only on the main menu. Would be great if they added a catch mode or feeding mode just to be able to interact more.. I purchased this game under the pretense that there would be some "game" aspect to it, where there are goals or courses, and props are unlocked as you accomplish more things. I didn't initially realize this is purely a sandbox game. There are no aspects of training your corgi, as your dog is perfectly trained from the beginning. There's no interaction with the dog, like giving treats or petting. You have all the props to use from the beginning. I'd love to be able to complete goals and unlock props one by one so you can appreciate them more. I also felt the system to rotate and place objects was cumbersome and not fun. The one thing I really did like was the teleportation system, which uses the grips and trigger and frees up the pad. I played this or about 10 minutes and ended up requesting a refund.. I really like this game but the main issue I have is not being able to move back away virtually from the play area so I can see the course without having to physically move around and running into the wall. As it stands now you can only move physically. I let the Dev know about this but all that was said that they were aware of people complaining about this issue but did not say if it was gonna be fixed. As it stands, I cannot recommend this until this issue is addressed.

Update: I can finally give this a positive, the Dev listened to what needed to be changed and for me, the teleportation is a huge step in the right direction. Thanks again for listening!!!. This is a game where I really wanted to give it a 'maybe' rating. The game is pretty fun but the fact that you can't move is a killer. The controls aren't the greatest, but they would be fine if I could actually move closer to what I'm working on. Trying to fidget with your props from a distance can be very frustrating. I also ran into bugs here and there. An object got stuck in my hand once and I couldn't get it off.

If you're into creating wacky contraptions/courses in a level-editor fashion, then you might enjoy it. It kind of reminded me of my younger years when I used to make ridiculous roller coaster scenarios in Roller Coaster Tycoon, among other games that involve re-testing creations to see if they were successful. The visuals were also quite pixelated. On 'Epic' quality it looks a lot nicer, but had occasional framerate jitters in courses that had a lot of obects/effects on screen.
